An Appalachian Summer Festival has always been largely self-sustaining, and has benefited from strong private support through individual and corporate giving, which has enabled it to not only survive— but to thrive and grow. Still, maintaining quality arts programming is expensive, and the festival faces the challenge of ever-increasing artist fees. Because the festival is committed to preserving affordable ticket prices, and making the festival accessible for all, ticket revenues cover only about 30% of the festival's needed income, and simply can't keep pace with the rising costs of presenting quality arts programs. Private support— from you and other loyal patrons who share a passionate devotion to the arts-- is more critical than ever before.

If you are not a current donor, we ask you to consider an annual gift today! Below is a coupon for your use. Thank you for your support!
